An Erie County jury has cleared an Erie man accused of sexually assaulting a 7-year-old girl.

Montgomery Pommer, whose last known address was in the 400 block of Stafford Avenue, was found not guilty of charges of aggravated indecent assault, indecent assault, corruption of minors and endangering the welfare of children, according to court records.

The trial was held Thursday in Judge Fred P. Anthony's courtroom. William Weichler represented Pommer.

Police accused Pommer in February of molesting the girl while they watched a movie in August 2002.
